2019 Inductees

FRANK J. HEINRICH (posthumously)

Frank Heinrich came from humble beginnings and became a giant among circulation leaders, not just in Vermont and New England, but he excelled across the nation and internationally. His highly successful ideas and work were copied by many in the circulation field. A nationally known innovator, Frank lectured throughout the United States, Canada, and Europe. He served as a director for the International Circulation Managers Association and chaired two committees. As noted by one of his son's in reflecting on his passage from this world, "If there is a Heavenly Tribune, with Dad being reunited with his respected colleagues, circulation numbers will without a doubt be climbing!"

BOB KATZEN

For more than four decades, Publisher and Founder Bob Katzen has been distributing Beacon Hill Roll Call to newspapers, TV, radio stations and websites throughout the Commonwealth giving readers an opportunity to monitor their elected officials' actions on Beacon Hill. Bob has had the tenacity and determination to keep this vital information source alive all these years through good times and bad, a struggling economy and major changes in the newspaper industry. This allows hundreds of thousands of readers to be aware of what the government is doing, to hold these politicians accountable, to express themselves on issues that matter to them and thus remain an informed citizenry.

W. ZACHARY (BILL) MALINOWSKI (posthumously)

For more than 30 years at The Providence Journal, Bill Malinowski explored organized crime and public corruption, street gangs and gun violence. His colorful stories were distinguished by his ability to talk to everyone: cops and robbers both, but also the victims. He coupled compassion with accountability. His many honors included being named "master reporter" by the New England Society of News Editors in 2014, and induction into the Rhode Island Press Association Hall of Fame in 2017. In 2015, Malinowski was diagnosed with Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease. The courage and determination he demonstrated after receiving this devastating news may be his most lasting contribution. Bill Malinowski died in August 2016. He was 57.

JOSEPH W. MCQUAID

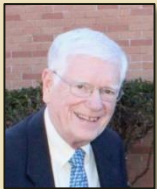

Joseph McQuaid is a 3rd generation newspaperman. His father BJ McQuaid founded the Sunday News, which he sold to Union Leader owners William and Nackey Loeb, creating the Union Leader and New Hampshire Sunday News. Joe started working at the Union Leader part-time in high school. As Joe rose through the ranks as Nackey Loeb's go-to editor, he became more acquainted with the business side of running a newspaper and was eventually named President and Publisher of the Union Leader upon Mrs. Loeb's retirement in 1999. Before Mrs. Loeb's passing Joe lead the effort to open the non-profit Nackey S. Loeb School of Communications. He has worked at the newspaper full-time for almost 50 years.

JOHN P. WIDDISON

John Widdison was the last managing editor of the Worcester Gazette before the paper merged with the Telegram. In 1988 he was tasked with merging the two papers, a laborious task that involved choosing one city editor when there were two, one sports editor when there were two, and so on. He personally met with more than 100 newsroom staffers to discuss their desires under the one-paper future. Of course, not every staffer was satisfied, but every staffer was heard, and for that John Widdison cemented the already widely-respected reputation he had earned over the years. He led with compassion and intelligence thereby engendering a teamwork, we're-all-in-this-together work atmosphere. John's impact was felt not only in the newsroom but also in the community where he welcomed feedback from readers on everything from missed deliveries to spelling errors. Throughout his career John embodied the best of local New England journalism with a strong personal commitment to coverage of town, city and state news.
