GENERAL EXCELLENCE ..... 46

REPORTING

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Rick Koster, The Day, New London, CT
Surgical Soundtracks- Fascinatingly interesting, something not many know about, well written with just the right touch of humor and whimsy.

Second Place: Bob Keyes, Portland Press Herald, Portland, ME
With 3 generations of artwork challenging Americans this summer, Wyeths command a moment- A well-written piece that helps make the paintings come alive as the reader learns the stories behind them.

Second Place: Victor Infante, Telegram & Gazette, Worcester, MA
Worcester Artists eye changing scene with cautious optimism- Good comprehensive informative look at the arts scene in the 'new' Worcester. Lots of sources, lots of interesting stories.

Third Place: Kathi Scrizzi Driscoll, Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA
"Hightown" films in Ptown- Good behind-the-scenes story that is well-written, interesting and entertaining. It captures the ritual of creating and filming scenes for a new TV show.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: Dana Barbuto, The Patriot Ledger, Quincy, MA
Tower of Power/Quincy Stuntman- Great story about a stuntman and what he does and how he thinks, written in an entertaining and compelling fashion.

Second Place: Steve Pfarrer, Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA
Extraordinary Paintings of Ordinary Gals- Good, historical look at a woman painter who defied existing mores and championed her own insights and feelings in her painting.

Third Place: Chris Bergeron, The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA
Bergeron Harvard Beetles - Beetles? A surprisingly good read thanks to clear, clean writing, and historical perspective about a rich man's unusual hobby.

Weekly Newspapers

First Place: Becky Pritchard, Mount Desert Islander, Bar Harbor, ME
In sketches, parking meters have their say- Good piece about how a creative painter uses talent to deal with community controversy. It's a catchy, light and very human story

Second Place: Sally Pollak, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
At Bread and Puppet, an artful installation honors departed members, family and friends- A fascinating story about a unique and artistic way friends and family are remembered.

Third Place: Bill Eville, Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA
For Scott Frank Staying True to the Process Is the Only Constant- Good story about a screenwriter and what went into his TV series, solid writing.

BUSINESS/ECONOMIC REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Mary Biekert, The Day, New London, CT
Southeastern Connecticut is under the social media influence- The rising power of social media influencers is documented in this story that may define the 21st century. That the story was written about New London makes it all the more relevant.

Second Place: Telegram & Gazette, Worcester, MA
Remaking Worcester Neighborhoods- A comprehensive look at the changing nature of Worcester's neighborhoods as the city meets the changing needs of its citizens. It is a document of a moment in time.

Third Place: Michel Puffer, Harrison Connery, Republican-American, Waterbury, CT
Getting Beyond the Ugly- This series of stories bears witness to the legacy of one of New England's long-time strengths - manufacturing - and how difficult it can be to unwind its decline in ways that benefit its now down-on-their-luck population centers.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: Erin Tiernan, The Patriot Ledger, Quincy, MA
Squeezed out: Quincy building boom leaves families behind- Perhaps the greatest impediment to economic justice in the expensive Northeast is the cost of housing, and this story captures the challenges facing

Quincy as it benefits from its proximity to Boston's booming economy through a balanced and insightful mix of personal reportage and quantitative back-up, while documenting Quincy's spotty record in helping its less well-off citizens afford a decent place to live.

*Second Place: Mary Whitfill,
The Patriot Ledger, Quincy, MA*

Net Loss: Scituate's vanishing fishing fleet- The fishing industry has undergone seismic shifts over the last few decades, and this two-story series captures the issues from both sides - the fishermen and the fish mongers - while at the same time painting a personal picture of the coming death of the fishing heritage of one Massachusetts town.

*Third Place: Christopher Peak,
New Haven Independent, New Haven, CT*

Dickey Deals Kept English Station Dirty- An exhaustive examination of the dirty dealings surrounding the disposition of an ecological nightmare of a power plant. The reporter dug and dug and comes up with a precautionary tale about what can happen in the shadows of real estate dealings having to do with industrial sites beyond any use (or redemption).

Specialty Publications

---

*First Place: Scott Blake,
Providence Business News, Providence, RI*
IS R.I.'S MIDDLE CLASS SHRINKING?- Missing mid-level jobs affect the whole country. The Providence paper is doing its readers a great service by confirming their worst fears about the local job market and the arrival of the service economy. The profiling of the health care and construction areas are low-hanging fruit, but the hard numbers provided by the charts are very convincing. There is no comparison to other entrants.

*Second Place: Jessica Bartlett,
Boston Business Journal, Boston, MA*
High cost of seed capital by marijuana accelerators may be hurting sector diversity- Very detailed and easy to follow. Thanks to this publication, potential entrepreneurs can see what a minefield they're about to enter and how much savvy they need to navigate it. A real public service.

*Third Place: Jessica Bartlett,
Boston Business Journal, Boston, MA*
Advocates say cannabis contracts with town amount to 'extortion'- Finally someone inspects the on-the-ground process of a piece of legislation that has little precedent.

Weekly Newspapers circulation 6,000+

First Place: Chelsea Edgar, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Who Wants to Work on a Vermont Dairy Farm? A Reporter Spent a Week Finding Out- Wading through the shock-value descriptions made this an interesting read, albeit one that really is more about process and operations than business per se. We get that this is a small operation, and it's fun to watch the gummed-up works. The immigration side gets short shrift, especially lacking a side-by-side comparison with other, similar operations vis-a-vis the cost-savings side of the equation. It's easier to describe when you should be doing more digging. That said, however, the writer has done considerable digging--literally and figuratively--to bring a microscope to everyday life at a dairy facility. Kudos to covering many aspects and getting into the muck which, in itself, is enough explanation of how such businesses are set up to fail.

*Second Place: Brian Bushard,
The Inquirer & Mirror, Nantucket, MA*
Town Sets Qualifications for Second Pot Shop- A very interesting and solid look at the medical marijuana licensing process. Now, if we can just get a source who understands how sales traffic could/should be expected based on actual prospective customer counts, this would be a top-rated piece. As it is, it does shed light on the bureaucratic minefield and the consequences of politicizing a business. Government really seems to be the "fish out of water" in this endeavor.

*Third Place: Kate Cough,
The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME*
Walmart asks for millions in tax abatements - A very interesting story but unfortunately with Walmart sources not making a single appearance. The piece does, though, show the two-facedness of some businesses (i.e., give us property tax abatements and we'll bring lots of money to your local coffers and, oh yeah, we'll want some of that money back at some point while we drive your other establishments out of business).

Weekly Newspapers circulation less than 6,000

---

First Place: Elaine Cushman Carroll,
Milton Times, Milton, MA

Renting and buying in Milton, MA - A strong consumer piece that profiles housing stock in the Milton area. The reader discovers the myriad of factors that relate to housing shortages. The series is strong in reader interest as it profiles the needs of the soon-to-be-retired, millennials and the elderly. The Times is in step with the much-needed trend of newspapers re-examining a traditional part of the American dream.

First Place: David D Kindy,
Old Colony Memorial, Plymouth, MA
Pilgrim Nuclear Power Station construction changed the face of Plymouth- Really written well, this series could have been a 5-parter. But as is, it wins this category hands-down with a good combination of sourcing and perspective-setting. Very impressive.

Second Place: Josh O'Gorman,
Stowe Reporter, Stowe, VT
New tobacco laws impact cannabis products, sales- Unintended legislative consequences make this a cruel but interesting human situation that the writer covers with objectivity and some pathos. What an unfortunate mess but a fascinating read. Kudos to the writer for keeping tabs on the Legislature. All towns should be so lucky, to assure that local businesses don't "go up in smoke" of confusion and the unfortunate acts of myopic politicians.

Third Place: Michelle Sherburne,
Journal Opinion, Bradford, VT
Downtown hub set to open- Interesting piece, but told only from the view of the venture's potential. That means much anecdotal affirmation and little critical data with which the reader can judge for him/herself. That said, however, the reader gets a sense that local business may be making a comeback thanks to some out-of-the-box thinking and imagination. Good to see a reporter trying to cover the unorthodox for a change.

CRIME AND COURTS REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Mark Hayward and Shawne K. Wickham,
New Hampshire Union Leader, Manchester, NH
Bear Brook murders- Riveting series of how new evidence emerged in a 35-year-old murder case that left at least four people dead and many others deeply affected. The authors successfully translated complex details about the victims into well-written, engrossing stories. Excellent work.

Second Place: Brian Amaral,
Providence Journal, Providence, RI
Golden boy Ernst's fall from grace- Well-organized story about a legendary tennis star's fall from grace after his involvement with the college admissions scandal. The author leaves no stone unturned in relaying this ultimate saga about greed and graft. Very well written. Great use of interviews. Bravo.

Third Place: Edmund H. Mahony,
Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
When the examiner becomes the examined- Excellent story about the shadow side of forensic science - how blindly accepting forensic testimony led to the imprisonment of two men for three decades. This story is well-told, well-researched and a terrific read. Great job!

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

First Place: Alyssa Dandrea,
Concord Monitor, Concord, NH
Fighting Back: Confronting domestic violence in New Hampshire- Excellent comprehensive series on the prevalence of domestic violence in the state of New Hampshire. This series, supported by startling statistics, explores the complexities of this crime. The deep personal stories of the victims are riveting. Exceptional reporting and writing. Bravo.

Second Place: Cody Shepard,
The Enterprise, Brockton, MA
Prosecutor: Crash scene strewn with bags of pot- Excellent story on the arraignment of a teenager whose alleged reckless behavior ended the lives of four of his friends. The reporter makes it clear -- through details of the crash and scenes in the courtroom -- that everyone loses in this situation. This story is well reported and well told. Congratulations.

Third Place: Rebecca Hyman,
Taunton Daily Gazette, Taunton, MA

DRUG COURT GRADS Meet the Taunton Drug Court class of 2018- This is a well-reported uplifting story that demonstrates how one municipality is addressing addiction one person at a time. The reporter carefully balances successes with failures, giving us an accurate map for those on the recovery road. Good reporting. Good writing. Nice job.

Weekly Newspapers

First Place: Kate O'Neill,
Seven Days, Burlington, VT

Trafficked: How the Opioid Epidemic Drives Sexual Exploitation in Vermont- Absolutely riveting story about the horrific intersection between opioid addiction and sexual exploitation of women in Vermont. The strong local news angle coupled with powerful personal accounts makes this a must-read. Excellent writing and research. Bravo.

Second Place: John Flowers,
Addison County Independent, Middlebury, VT
Schmidt sentenced to jail and bill seeks to regulate massage therapists- Remarkable story about a voyeur who, under the guise of massage therapy, betrayed the trust of 30 women. The testimony of the victims is disturbingly clear. The incident -- and no doubt the reporting of it -- has prompted proposed regulations of the massage therapy industry. This story is well-written and well told. Terrific work.

Third Place: Amy Saltzman,
Cambridge Chronicle and Tab, Cambridge, MA
Solved: 1969 murder of Harvard grad student- There are few stories as interesting as a solved cold case -- and this 50-year-old murder is no exception. The story begins with the breaking news angle about forensics evidence but thankfully goes much further -- relaying the victim's last moments with stunning detail. Excellent story told well under deadline pressure. Good work!

EDUCATION REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Dan Glaun, MassLive, Springfield, MA
The fall of a Massachusetts special education school- Excellent investigation into what forced the failure of a Massachusetts special ed school. Well-written story with really in-depth reporting. Deserving of first place.

Second Place: Cynthia McCormick,
Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA
Where have all the children gone?- Keeping families with young children in towns on the outer Cape has led to some creative ways to educate them. Excellent graphics enhanced this story.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: Paul Leighton,
The Salem News, Salem, MA
Questions remain in college closing- This is an excellent look at the events and the people involved in the closing of a small college. The reporter was thorough and wrote a compelling story, part of it as seen through the eyes of a former trustee of the school. Worthy of first place.

Second Place: Lauren Young,
The Milford Daily News, Milford, MA
Student Drafts Menstrual Products Bill- When a female high school senior decided that her school's bathrooms needed free menstrual products (they all have toilet paper, don't they?), she joined forces with a male state legislator to draft a bill to ensure that women students had what they needed. This was well-written and most readable.

Third Place: Dusty Christensen, Scott Merzbach,
Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA
Hampshire in Transition- Although this series of stories could have used more editing, the topic--the closing of the small but prestigious-- Hampshire College was thoroughly covered and gave the reader plenty of details.

Third Place: Linda Murphy,
The Herald News, Fall River, MA
Flexible seating- It's fun to be in Ms Pacheco's classroom. You get to sit on nifty cushions and move around. Oh, and learn, too. Good feature story.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Molly Walsh, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Survival of the Smartest: Vermont's Colleges Must Adapt as Pool of Potential Students Declines- So many factors led these stories to receive first place. The graphics were dynamite. The topic, while not new, was covered thoroughly. The writing made me want to keep reading. And who knew that Vermont had so many colleges and that more than half of them have lost annual enrollment since 2007. Darned good read.

Second Place: Bill Shaner, Worcester Magazine, Worcester, MA
How Sex Ed Really Died- In a community where the number of sexually transmitted diseases and the teen birth rate are high, school leaders argue over whether or not sex education is important. This was a well-done and interesting story that should have had a serious impact on the community.

Third Place: Emily Gowdey-Backus, Providence Business News, Providence, RI
Why don't students want to teach?- These stories are an interesting look at the decline in the number of college students who want to major in education and go into teaching. Good reporting on the problem in Rhode Island.

ENVIRONMENTAL REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Alex Kuffner, Providence Journal, Providence, RI
Rising Threat; Troubled waters in Newport; Dodging deluges- Excellent. Great public service reporting about vulnerabilities to publicly owned systems as climate-change related risks, including sea level rise and more intense storms, rise. Deeply reported, well written and well organized. Excellent images, including some gripping original graphics and photographs, including historic photos. This is work that other news outlets should aspire to. Bravo.

Second Place: Cyrus Moulton, Telegram & Gazette, Worcester, MA
A new leaf/10 years after Asian Longhorned Beetle- Very nice work catching readers up on a city's response to an invasive pest that had to be contained over a decade. Deep reporting, solid structure and told voice and a storyteller's flare. (Yes to the narrative passages; they create memorable stories.) Very good graphics. Super work.

Third Place: Jan Ellen Spiegel, The CT Mirror, Hartford, CT
With climate change brings hard choices- Extremely informative looks at local public policy issues related to global climate change. These stories are services to readers because they inform people about risks and problems many may not know about.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: Erin Tiernan, The Patriot Ledger, Quincy, MA
Picturesque and polluted- Extremely good dig into perplexing and serious health troubles in a community that has long lived alongside industry and could see more. Nothing exaggerated here. Everything is put in solid environmental and medical science context. Well organized, engaging, every word and sentence is crystal clear, not too long. Super service to readers.

Second Place: Paul Cuno-Booth, The Keene Sentinel, Keene, NH
Tank flagged by state part of environmental concerns still plaguing Keene property- Abandoned oil tank on a town property may not be the sexiest starting point for a story, but this is good accountability journalism. Years after the owner, the town and the state were notified, a documented hazard persists. Turns out the property owner has been in hot water elsewhere for not tackling clean ups. Who is going to keep everyone involved accountable if not the press? Nice work.

Third Place: Corlyn Voorhees, The Enterprise, Brockton, MA
Rebuilding the Rainbow's End Playground to cost pot of gold- This is a very deeply reported and clearly told tale about a former local treasure's conversion into a suspected environmental threat. And how no one is taking responsible for reviving or demolishing it. An unusual and hefty local news story. Nice work.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Rich Saltzberg, The Martha's Vineyard Times, Vineyard Haven, MA
Vineyard Wind- Bravo. This is excellent coverage of a very local, ongoing story involving what may be one of the biggest ecology-related projects ever proposed in Martha's Vineyard jurisdiction. Stories are clear and detailed, not sensationalist or partisan. Technical info is well translated. Fundamental, good beat journalism.

Second Place: Paul Heintz, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Drain the Swamp? Scott Wades Into State Wetland Dispute- Nice investigative work. Is it appropriate for a governor to wade into a conflict between a homeowner and state regulators? This report doesn't take sides but it does a deep dive into what happened, giving readers lots of information with which to decide.

Third Place: Mike Freeman, Newport Life Magazine, Newport, RI
A Watershed Moment- A lot of what environmental journalism does, is make green infrastructure, invisible to so many, visible. This is an excellent example of that at a place facing a reckoning over its fragile drinking water supply. (That specifics of today's fragility is the news.) All wrapped up in a nice read. Very good work.

Third Place: Molly Walsh, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Snow Go: Short Winters, Warm Temperatures Bedevil Vermont's Nordic Ski Areas- This piece brings fascinating local news: The decline of natural snow pack at lower elevations is threatening some Nordic ski operations. Some are closing; others are adapting. Because they must.

GENERAL NEWS STORY

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Republican-American, Waterbury, CT
Confession- Comprehensive examination of a diocesan report on sex abuse by clergy, and numerous follow-ups on that report. Reporting went far beyond the initial report, to look at this important issue from many angles. Well reported, written and edited. Thorough and fair.

Second Place: Bob Keyes, Portland Press Herald, Portland, ME
The manipulation of 'LOVE,' 'HOPE' and the life of Robert Indiana- Interesting piece on an interesting but hard-to-know man and artist whose life and work is embroiled in a post-mortem court entanglement. Leaves the reader wanting to know more about this man and his drama.

Third Place: Jackqueline Tempera, MassLive, Springfield, MA
Affairs, sex at Town Hall and a $40K investigation; What's going on in Rockland?- Tackles a ticklish and complicated scandal in a generally clear recap of this tangled tale. Fascinating small-town sex-and-politics drama, generally well told.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: The Eagle-Tribune, North Andover, MA
Merrimack Valley gas disaster ongoing coverage- This story, recapping the first three days of the pervasive gas fires that caused death, damage, destruction and fear in three Merrimack Valley communities, seems to be indicative of the careful, comprehensive coverage this newspaper devoted to this historic event. This story is crisply written, thoroughly detailed about the news of the event, and incorporates deftly the human element involved. So too do the multiple sidebars and folios indicate the Eagle-Tribune's excellent response to this tragic event.

Second Place: Hadley Barndollar, Portsmouth Herald, Portsmouth, NH
'Completely heartbroken': Beloved lobsterman loses addiction fight- Compelling account of a troubled and tragic soul. Well-reported and -written.

Third Place: Bera Dunau, Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA
Last call at legendary Northampton bar- Touching piece combining feature elements into the news story about a historic bar's closing. Excellent quotes woven into this nostalgic piece. Well backgrounded.

Specialty Publications

First Place: Zachary Comeau, Worcester Business Journal, Worcester, MA
Slow marijuana rollout helping black market- An expansive takeout on a hot topic, rich in details and expansive in scope. The main story alone is worth an award. One of its highlights is providing context to show where Massachusetts stands in legal pot operations vs. other states. Enhancing that are accompanying stories and graphics that take the topic to a top-notch level of information. Even includes business advice and legal advice columns and an editorial.

Second Place: Mary MacDonald, Providence Business News, Providence, RI
HOW SAFE IS YOUR WORKPLACE?- Excellent reporting, writing, editing and layout of this under-covered topic.

GENERAL NEWS STORY, *continued

Third Place: Jennifer Huberdeau,

UpCountry Magazine, Pittsfield, MA

Keeping the fair alive- Solid account about the current state of state fairs. Covers more than the local fair, and explores in some depth the upsides and downsides of running state fairs in the current day.

Weekly Newspapers

First Place: Bryan McGonigle,

North Andover Citizen, North Andover, MA

Gas explosion - A response to this major disaster equivalent in most respects to what would be expected in coverage: Details on extent of damage; a helpful guide to resources offering help to those affected; follow-up on the aftermath.

Second Place: Madeline Clark,

The Other Paper, South Burlington, VT

To SoBu or not to SoBu?- Serious but not overly heavy look at what comes off as a legitimate controversy in the community. Lots of voices represented in a balanced way. Well backgrounded.

Third Place: Max Sullivan,

Hampton Union, Hampton, NH

Dueling Trump Signs: Neighbors divided, not divisive- Different take on the never-ending Trump-loving and -bashing stories. As well-balanced a piece as is the friendship between these neighbors with opposite political allegiances.

GOVERNMENT REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Michael Cousineau and Paul Feely,

New Hampshire Union Leader, Manchester, NH

No response No problem. Firefighters collect taxpayer-funded 'Christmas bonus' no matter what- Often the best stories are hidden in dreary documents. New Hampshire's Union Leader and reporters Michael Cousineau and Paul Feely discovered that 200 Manchester firefighters received a taxpayer-funded Christmas bonus in the form of payouts for fires that had never fought. The emerging front-page story, entitled "No response? No problem," revealed a municipal scandal that was hidden in plain sight.

Second Place: Shira Schoenberg,

The Republican, Springfield, MA

Failures in the Massachusetts foster care system- MassLive came in second by a nose in this highly competitive category distinguished by stellar reporting. Its multi-part series on failures in the state's foster care system is what government reporting should be. Relying on both case studies and detailed research, the paper wrote compellingly about the foster-care problem, how the government is responding, and how it might be solved.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: The Herald News, Fall River, MA

Arrest of Mayor Jasiel Correia- (I know this is long, but this story merits it.) In these economically challenging times, every newspaper faces the decision sooner or later. When really big news strikes, do you focus on business as usual, or do you go all in on the emergency? The Fall River (MA) Herald News chose the latter option when then-Mayor Jasiel Correia II was indicted by the feds, refused to step down, and finally found himself defeated for re-election. Anticipating the indictment, the paper had pre-written the skeleton of a story for immediate update and posting. It put its entire reporting staff on the case (two reporters cut short their vacations) and pulled down its paywall so the entire community could access the first-day coverage. The paper made the most of all media available to it: Not only did it wrap its print stories in attractive but undistracting graphics, but it also live-streamed the press conference, conducted a reader poll, and managed the flood of activity on its social media channels. Most important, its reporting was fair, comprehensive, and jargon-free. No angle was overlooked. For political geeks, the paper offered online links to primary documents; for those with short attention spans, it ran an admirably brief "6 things to know" sidebar. Not surprisingly, the Herald News became the information source of record for media outlets nationwide. Look to its coverage if you want a master class in how to handle The Big Story when it strikes.

Second Place: Christopher Peak,

New Haven Independent, New Haven, CT

New Haven "Scoops and Tosses" $160M in Debt- In New Haven, the alders voted for a $150 million restructuring of the city's debt, after reaching a deal on how much of the savings should go to operating funds and how much to long-term fiscal challenges. Believe it or not, in three stories illustrated with bar and line graphs, Christopher Peak and the New Haven Independent make you care. Somehow they explain these mind-numbing concepts in a series that you actually *want* to read--and that teaches you a thing or two about municipal finances.

Second Place: Ben Berke, The Enterprise, Brockton, MA
'People's selectman' called city Slumlord'- The Brockton Enterprise lived up to its name when it published Ben Berke's investigative series revealing that a 40-year selectman in West Bridgewater turned out to be an alleged "slumlord" in nearby Brockton, Massachusetts. This solid piece capably documents housing code violations both through citizen complaints and through careful review of city records.

Third Place: The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
Chickens- Nashua, New Hampshire, has a chicken problem. There's a theory that says if you want citizens to be interested in the legislative process, you should pick a bill that they'll want to read about. Perhaps that's why the Telegraph and reporters Adam Urquhart and Hannah LaClaire provided such detailed accounts about the progress of the city's urban chicken bill. Or maybe it's because it's not every day that a pun-loving editor can publish headlines and ledes about legislators "pecking" at the law, residents "clucking" over it, and the attempt by both to reduce the surplus of "chickens crossing the road."

Weekly Newspapers circulation 6,000+

First Place: Emily Gowdey-Backus, Scott Blake, Providence Business News, Providence, RI
Can solar thrive without incentives?- When you finish reading the Providence Business Journal's two-part series on the state of the solar and offshore wind industries in Rhode Island, you can tell this is a publication that knows its audience. The pieces, written by Emily Gowdey-Backus and Scott Blake, illustrate the impact of governmental incentives (or lack thereof) in growing the energy industries, while also appropriately bold-facing the names of the companies leading the charge in the search for alternative sources.

Second Place: Paul Heintz, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Backseat Driver? In Gov. Phil Scott's Administration, Chief of Staff Jason Gibbs Takes the Wheel- Paul Heintz offers a rollicking discussion about whether Chief of Staff Jason Gibbs may be calling the shots for his boss, Vermont Gov. Phil Scott. It's not entirely clear why it's important, but this inside-baseball political tour de force makes for a hell of a fun read.

Second Place: John Stanton, The Inquirer & Mirror, Nantucket, MA
Has Town Meeting Run its Course?- After reporting on a Special Town Meeting that failed for the lack of a quorum, contributing writer John Stanton took a step back to assess whether there is still a place for an open Town Meeting in modern New England. One can't help but conclude its days are numbered.

Second Place: Noah Asimow, Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA
How Tiny Aquinnah Saved Itself from Overdevelopment- Without wasting words, Noah Masimow wrote this eloquent, stunningly illustrated, gem of a piece. It takes a look at how one Vineyard community, Aquinnah, made decisions 20 years ago that have succeeded in allowing it to resist the overdevelopment that has plagued much of the rest of the Vineyard.

Third Place: Mary MacDonald, Providence Business News, Providence, RI
Can city speed development?- Why is it getting so difficult to build in Providence? That's the question addressed in depth in Mary MacDonald's well-researched piece. She does a particularly good job demonstrating the relationship between government incentives and real estate growth.

Weekly Newspapers circulation less than 6,000

First Place: Steve Adams, Banker & Tradesman, Boston, MA
Affordability Goals Slow to Influence JP/Rox Development- Banker & Tradesman took on the complex topic of housing affordability in the region's largest city, and came up with a comprehensive, well-researched, and eminently readable analysis. The piece was written by Steve Adams with other B&T staff.

Second Place: Kris Olson, Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly, Boston, MA
The race to end all races?- This story, examines how an election can work if voters don't know anything about the candidates or the office. Kris Olson of Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly cast light on the little-watched election results for Governor's Council.

GOVERNMENT REPORTING, continued

Third Place: Madeline Clark,

The Other Paper, South Burlington, VT

Vermont's childcare crisis- Combining an individual case study with close examination of state legislation, Madeline Clark of The Other Paper writes well not only about Vermont's child care crisis, but also about the various proposals for laws to do something about it.

HEALTH REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Mark Patinkin,

Providence Journal, Providence, RI

Touched by cancer- It was a privilege to judge Mark Patinkin's remarkable memoir recounting his journey through medical oncology. Deeply personal, the piece never strays from the human dimensions of cancer -- not just from the patient's perspective, but also through the eyes and hearts of the medical professionals involved in diagnosis and treatment. Patinkin's writing is exquisite, striking just the right tone in describing the emotional roller-coaster of a cancer diagnosis. Photos and packaging help flesh things out, but the real star here is the writing. At a time when journalism is increasingly preoccupied with visual story-telling, Mark Patinkin reminds us of the power of the written word. Thank you, Mark.

Second Place: Shawne Wickham,

New Hampshire Union Leader, Manchester, NH

Chronic pain - Patients rally for change in Concord (from Beyond the Stigma series)- Smart, interesting take on an unsuspected consequence of the opioid crisis -- new restrictions on opioid access have limited options for chronic pain sufferers. This four-part series illustrates clearly how regulators and insurers interact with medical providers to affect patient care, both for good and ill. Multiple interviews with chronic pain sufferers are particularly well done -- informative and often poignant, but never cloying. Good job.

Third Place: Karen Florin,

The Day, New London, CT

Four Hour Medical Miracle for Retired Judicial Marshal from New London- Staff writer Karen Florin recounts the compelling story of a 62-year-old retiree who undergoes a successful heart transplant procedure. That personal touch is both welcome and necessary, but the piece is fundamentally a primer on the transplantation process itself. Like all good medical journalism, Florin keeps her narrative readable while effectively explaining a complex and highly technical subject in clear layman's terms.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

First Place: Henry Schwan, Jeff Malachowski, and Caitlyn Kelleher,

The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA

Heart Study- This thoroughly comprehensive four-part retrospective on the 70th anniversary of the Framingham Heart Study gets the nod in a VERY competitive category. It's all here: archival material tracing the ground-breaking study, numerous interviews with second- and third-generation family members, and much-needed perspective from the medical professionals and researchers who made it all tick. It's clear this project was well-planned and executed. Writing is straightforward and on point, with installments broken into digestible chunks. A worthy treatment of one of the most significant medical studies in American history.

Second Place: Roger Carroll,

Granite State News Collaborative, New Hampshire

A Journey Through NH's Mental Health System- Roger Carroll's first-person reflection on his longtime struggles with mental illness and subsequent introduction to the New Hampshire mental health system deserves a journalistic Purple Heart for bravery. With a clear-eyed focus and an absence of misplaced sentiment, he leads readers through a six-day stay at a locked psychiatric facility. The author lays it all out there in this three-part series -- a difficult upbringing, the institutions that previously failed him, and the system that ultimately responded ably to his recent mental health crisis. Thank you, Roger, for this courageous and important entry.

Third Place: Hadley Barndollar, Deb Cram,

Portsmouth Herald, Portsmouth, NH

Will to Walk- Definitely overwritten and a bit pretentious, with a meandering narrative that should have been better focused, but give reporter Hadley Barndollar and the Seacoast team credit for putting in the time and effort to connect intimately with a local family struggling with a father's sudden death and a daughter's affliction. Online presentation is very impressive, with extremely strong photography completing the package.

Third Place: Rebecca Hyman, Taunton Daily Gazette, Taunton, MA
A PROMISE KEPT Donating a kidney because her husband was unable to- Compelling narrative about the widow of a stabbing victim fulfilling her late husband's wish to be an organ donor. Because the story itself packs an emotional wallop, writer Rebecca Hyman wisely refrains from additional embellishment. She doesn't overwrite and lets the details -- and the quotes -- speak for themselves. Sidebar adds a deeper understanding to the challenges of organ donation. Good job.

Weekly Newspapers

First Place: Ken Picard, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Exploring the Science, and the Snake Oil, Behind Regenerative Stem Cell Therapy- VERY thorough and reasonable consideration of stem cell clinics, which provide questionable therapy for thousands of dollars. Well written and diligently reported.

Second Place: Grant Welker, Worcester Business Journal, Worcester, MA
Worcester: New England's opioid capital- Very thorough and very easy to read about an important topic.

Third Place: Brittany Bowker, The Martha's Vineyard Times, Vineyard Haven, MA
Opioid epidemic hits home hard- Moving coverage of an important issue. Beautifully told. Excellent use of quotes.

HISTORY REPORTING

---

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Cynthia Simison, The Republican, Springfield, MA
"Time is now to bring home war dead from Korea"- A thoroughly engrossing view of a contemporary cause through the eyes of one witness to history is brought to life through this writer's great attention to her narrative and the apparent trust and rapport she was able to establish with her primary subject.

Second Place: Michael DeGirolamo Jr., Republican-American, Waterbury, CT
An End to the Fighting- Spectacular imagery, quotes and descriptions woven effectively together with historical touchpoints to deliver a superb historical retrospect.

Third Place: John Ruddy, Julia Bergman, The Day, New London, CT
State Pier- A fantastic lede brings the reader into a well-written and comprehensive examination of this regional economic engine. The writer illustrates very effectively and engagingly the costs and impact of this project - that has been plagued with misfortune and poor planning from the start.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: Jonathan Phelps, The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA
Returning home: Marlborough airman's remains identified- The story of the return of Tech Sgt. Alfred Sandini's remains stands out because of the work that was done to link the details of history to its impact on family members of the present, and the enrichment that an interactive map and other multimedia elements provided.

Second Place: Steve Collins, Sun Journal, Lewiston, ME
An Auburn murder in 1867 let to political feud in Augusta-

Third Place: Greta Jochem, Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA
The legend of 'Lesbianville'

Weekly Newspapers circulation 6,000+

First Place: Nick Garber, Addison County Independent, Middlebury, VT
Middlebury recalls Cold War victory & Soviet student exchanges changed lives- A fascinating and engaging feature that does a wonderful job bridging local to global while providing unique insights into the important role its subjects played in this historical geopolitical event.

Second Place: Janice Harvey, Worcester Magazine, Worcester, MA
Indian Hill Fire- While the subject of this feature is only locally significant - the writing style along with sensitive and sensational attention to detail provides a highly readable and gripping look back at this tragedy.

HISTORY REPORTING, continued

*Third Place: Derek Brouwer,
Seven Days, Burlington, VT*

UVM's Kake Walk Featured Blackface Performers for Decades- TIE - A provocative piece that frames a popular and well-received communal tradition against current events to deliver an award-worthy feature. Extremely well-researched and vividly detailed.

*Third Place: Noah Asimow,
Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA*

Fifty Years Later, Chappaquiddick Still Reverberates- TIE - Kudos to the author and Gazette editorial team for eschewing convention and focusing on the role that the 'newspaper' of record' played in chronicling this now infamous event and its aftermath. I loved the pace and flow.

---

Weekly Newspapers circulation less than 6,000

---

*First Place: Emily Clark,
Old Colony Memorial, Plymouth, MA*

Wampanoags Among Us, Pilgrims Among Us- A community newspaper needs to be a mirror. The Old Colony Memorial in Plymouth, Mass., was that as it focused on the town's 400th commemoration by taking voices of the present to give a look back at the past. Emily Clark and the newspaper are commended for providing the space for its indigenous- and colonial-descendants to speak about their heritage and share their insights. This series offers the newspaper's readers well-told stories and histories, some of which were not reflected for far too long.

*Second Place (Tie): Sarah Hinckley,
Mount Desert Islander, Bar Harbor, ME*

What's in a name? Government entities disagree on Swan's Island spelling- Visitors to Swan's Island in Maine might never guess an imbroglio about an apostrophe lurked large in the island's history. The place name, from whence it came and where it went, made for a well-written and reported story by Sarah Hinckley in the Mount Desert Islander. Her writing and reporting would make an English teacher proud, and any reader nodding their head with approval. A good piece of local history that never once made the eyes glaze over.

*Second Place (Tie): Tommy Gardner,
Stowe Reporter, Stowe, VT*

Moveable feasts- Stowe is synonymous with skiing, or at least that's what people who don't live in the area might think. Those close by, or who remember long-ago visits, know food and drink are also a part of the town. Tommy Gardner of the Stowe Reporter set a table that tells a history of mouth-watering food and, perhaps, memories of too much to drink. His story is a fun, well-written recounting of the eateries that fed and quenched skiers and others over the years as they traversed the Mountain Road.

HUMAN INTEREST FEATURE STORY

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

*First Place: G. Wayne Miller,
Providence Journal, Providence, RI*
Redemption: the fall and rise of Mark Gonsalves- Beautiful and sensitive story-telling about one man's journey from his worst days to the best of his life.

*Second Place: Dom Amore,
Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT*
Baseball's timeless tale- Steve Dalkowski's story isn't really about baseball, or a young pitcher with a phenomenal arm. His inability to escape the grasp of alcoholism makes you deeply sad, makes you smile, reminds you that there are no certainties with the gifts we're given, whatever they may be.

*Third Place: Doug Fraser,
Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA*
Clock shop owner all about saving time- What a fascinating step back in time, so to speak. A fascinating glimpse inside a world where the past is alive -- and keeping John Anderson busy -- tending to the health of treasured timepieces.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

*First Place: Hadley Bardollar, Deb Cram,
Portsmouth Herald, Portsmouth, NH*
Will to Walk- A beautiful and hope-lifting story of a family's resilience from heartbreak and hardship.

*Second Place: Jonathan Phelps,
The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA*
Casting a Legacy- Fascinating and well-written piece, a "where is she today" about a woman with a unique and prominent place in women's history.

Third Place: Steve Pfarrer,
Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA
Jarrett Krosoczka uses art to come to terms with a difficult childhood- A compelling exploration of the childhood pain -- the "hard truths" -- that shaped the life of an award-winning author and illustrator of children's book.

Weekly Newspapers circulation 6,000+

First Place: Dan Bolles,
Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Who Shot Mr. Cheeseface? The Vermont Demise of a Famous Mutt- A breezy, fun, breathless whodunit, told with pace and anticipation. Mr. Cheeseface may, in fact, may be the greatest dog name ever, but he has a life story to match and the writer doesn't miss a beat, covering all the bases, filling in all the blanks, heightening the drama. The narrative is contextually rich, the characters colorful and real. Wonderful topic; a story told with thought and precision and a strong human touch. To wit: Many dogs are afraid of thunder. But De Pierro believes Mr. Cheeseface's fear was something deeper: a premonition. "I think he knew what was going to happen to him," De Pierro said gravely. "I think he knew he was gonna get shot." Say no more.

Second Place: Brad Kane,
Worcester Business Journal, Worcester, MA
The Canal District group text- Interesting business story, explained clearly and written with a satisfying flow. Nice presentation, too, with a breakout box of the business owners and examples of their text threads.

Third Place: Darren Marcy,
Manchester Journal, Manchester, VT
Local icon 'Pal Joey' takes his last walk- A well-done and fully developed profile of a simple man whose community mission was more than meets the eye. Stories like these help to give a fuller sense of life in a community that is the sum of all its parts, not just a few. A nice blend of color and detail give life to "Pal Joey," to those who knew him, but moreso to those who did not but might have wished they did.

Weekly Newspapers circulation less than 6,000

First Place: Pem McNerney,
The Source, Madison, CT
The Secret to Arnold's Success May 22, 2019- This feature is written with a clever sense of place, journey and history -- a fun, full, conversational read. The cadence is deliberate and effective; the story puts the reader squarely in the writer's shoes, all senses heightened. Still, despite the unique voice, the author never gets in the way. The piece is wonderfully descriptive and stitched together with brief, but lively quotes ("One senior and a Junior Mint, please"). It's also written with an economy of well-chosen words. The read is tied up beautifully, if not brilliantly, with an unexpected -- or not -- ending to cleanse a popcorn-and-Coke covered palate. And who knows ... maybe an espresso to go.

Second Place: Emily Clark,
Old Colony Memorial, Plymouth, MA
Darlene Nickerson: OCM Person of the Year- Poignant, short-format tale of one person's quest, ability to perform life-saving work with animals and, at the same time, to help to soothe the pain that animal abuse and neglect can heap on humans.

Third Place: Tommy Gardner,
Stowe Reporter, Stowe, VT
Now you see me ... - The art of the deal of being a magician, told well, engagingly, and with just the right hint of context (Caribou, the second-largest city in the nation's second-largest county."). A good magician story, after all, can never be a full reveal.

INVESTIGATIVE / ENTERPRISE REPORTING

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Jacqui Rabe Thomas,
The CT Mirror, Hartford, CT
How some of America's Richest Towns Fight Affordable Housing- This series of stories holds the powerful accountable on one of the most important issues of our time--income inequality and its underlying causes. Bravo!

Second Place: Joe Wojtas, The Day, New London, CT
Stonington teacher resigned mid-year- An excellent example of investigative reporting that exposes a school system's failure to protect children.

Third Place: Dan Glaun,
MassLive, Springfield, MA
Police lobby assault- A strong piece of reporting that provides compelling evidence of excessive use of force by police and an attempt to coverup their wrongdoing. Well done!

INVESTIGATIVE/ENTERPRISE REPORTING,

continued

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

First Place: Concord Monitor, Concord, NH

Arrest and Fallout of teacher's arrest- A superb example of in-depth investigative reporting that holds the powerful accountable and results in significant change.

Second Place: Dusty Christensen,

Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA

In a Glass Box- A terrific example of building on an investigation done by others by adding new and significant information to the story. Well done.

Third Place: Haven Orecchio-Egresitz,

The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA

Sweet Brook- Excellent in-depth reporting on an institution impacting dozens of people. Great work!

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Greg Ryan,

Boston Business Journal, Boston, MA

Risk on the rise- Excellent work uncovering a serious hazard impacting thousands of people in Massachusetts. Investigative reporting at its best.

Second Place: Alicia Freese,

Seven Days, Burlington, VT

For Vermont's Sheriffs, Policing Is a Lucrative Business- A superb piece of work that exposes what happens when no one is watching to ensure that a government agency is only working for the people's interest.

Third Place: Grant Welker,

Worcester Business Journal, Worcester, MA

Tax Breaks: Paying for Growth- An excellent piece of enterprise reporting that digs deep into an issue that impacts taxpayers across Massachusetts.

LOCAL ELECTION COVERAGE

Daily Newspapers

---

First Place: Staff,

The Herald News, Fall River, MA

Recall of Mayor Jasiel Correia - election- Thorough coverage of a complicated recall/election process. The page 3 recall corner was a handy way to keep readers up to date without writing entire stories on incremental goings-on and reminders on how the process unfolded. Talking to people as they left the polls was another way to take the pulse of a community rocked by a scandal that drew national attention.

Second Place: Mark Pazniokas, Keith Phaneuf,

The CT Mirror, Hartford, CT

The race for governor- Excellent coverage of the issues and the candidates in the Connecticut governors race. This is good public service journalism that looked at the race from multiple perspectives including the NRA, the ground game, the budget deficit and more.

Third Place: Bera Dunau,

Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA

Five districts, five paths to victory- Interesting exploration of the outcome of five different districts and what it will mean for the future. Each segment provided detailed maps and clickable links to earlier stories for good context.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Staff and community,

Addison County Independent, Middlebury, VT

Local general election preview stories, letters, profiles, results and follow up- Extremely ambitious and well-executed coverage of statewide elections. Candidate profiles, letters to the editor and even an editorial guiding voters on questions to ask themselves in order to make an intelligent decision on whom to vote for supplemented the basic coverage. Good followup with results as well. It had everything but the kitchen sink. This paper was all in!

Second Place: The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME

Local Election Coverage- Excellent coverage of the issues and races leading up to the election. Election preview stories were nicely packaged with identifying banners. Great reader service provided by complete candidate bios and full tables after the election.

Third Place: Joanna Tzouvelis,

Belmont Citizen-Herald, Belmont, MA

Election - The importance of local elections is showcased by the amount of effort, and space, this paper devoted to them. Lots of letters to the editor and opinion pieces that served to give readers what they needed to make informed voting decisions.

LOCAL PERSONALITY PROFILE

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Josh Kovner,

Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT

The Turbulence Within- Profiling someone who's no longer with us, particularly under these hellish circumstances, is no easy task. Josh Kovner does a masterful job of using public records and his subject's own writings to tease out a detailed and gripping portrait.

Second Place: Kathleen Megan,

The CT Mirror, Hartford, CT

Election of first openly gay Kid Governor is a milestone. But coming out wasn't easy.- From the playful intro to the closing quote, this is a highly engaging read that's filled with surprises.

Third Place: Greg Saulmon,

The Republican, Springfield, MA

Life's Work: Ray Mason, the Pioneer Valley's king of rock 'n' roll- Compelling quotations are the oxygen in a story, and Greg Saulmon's skillful use of them fills this portrait with breath and life. The photos and videos are extra delights; together, they make a wonderful package.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: Marc Larocque,

The Enterprise, Brockton, MA

'I was just her kid' – Brockton foster mom cares for 240 boys- Marc Larocque pays touching tribute to Massachusetts' own Mother Teresa in this fine portrait of a remarkable human being.

Second Place: Elodie Reed,

Bennington Banner, Bennington, VT

NAACP Vermont director talks upbringing, race relations in her home state- Imagine growing up brown in one of the whitest states. Elodie Reed gets Vermont's NAACP director to open up on her "hypervisible and invisible" life in the Green Mountain state.

Third Place: Andy Castillo,

Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA

Flipping the script on loneliness- Andy Castillo's poignant, elegantly written profile of an elderly woman's determination to hit the road while she still can is worth your time.

Specialty Publications

First Place: Lisa Lynn, Vermont Sports, Middlebury, VT

Training for Life: The Story of Sarah True- This powerful portrait pulls back the curtain on a superstar athlete and her long-concealed struggles with depression. Mental illness can't be written about enough, and Lisa Lynn does it masterfully here.

Second Place: Bob Curley,

Newport Life Magazine, Newport, RI

Buying Newport- This is a textured, nuanced look at a man some might love to hate. Bob Curley does a terrific job of talking to key people around his subject to fill in the blanks for the reader. Well reported, nicely written.

Third Place: Geoff Currier,

Martha's Vineyard Arts & Idea, Vineyard Haven, MA

If these walls could talk- This intriguing profile is as much a portrait of the house as it is of its storied former owner. Geoff Currier brings both back to life.

Weekly Newspapers circulation 6,000+

First Place: Steve Myrick,

Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA

Straight Talk, No Chaser; Trying to Keep Up With Everett Poole- Steve Myrick's faintest touch of snark perfectly matches his curmudgeonly subject. The color and detail really bring the reader into this old salt's store -- and his life.

Second Place: Holly Pretsky,

Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA

A Bright Light in the Hour of Darkness, Lenny Verville Eases the Way- Profiling a funeral director can be a tricky undertaking, but Holly Pretsky's tasteful, nuanced portrait takes us into a world few of us go willingly.

Third Place: Maureen O'Reilly,

Valley Advocate, Northampton, MA

Mini Bottles — Mega Mess: Agawam man on a daily quest to get trash off the streets- This is a lively profile of a fascinating local character. We'll never look at a man picking cans the same way again.

LOCAL PERSONALITY PROFILE, *continued
Weekly Newspapers circulation less than 6,000

---

First Place: Rob Kiener,

Stowe Reporter, Stowe, VT

The Kidd from Stowe- Bright writing and skillful juxtaposition of Billy Kidd in his heyday and today make this a can't-put-down profile -- even if you've never strapped on skis.

Second Place: Emily Clark,

Old Colony Memorial, Plymouth, MA

Celebrating LGBT Pride Month with Plymouth gay artist Gerard Donelan- A singularly powerful and important portrait. Emily Clark really managed to coax some deeply personal insights out of her subject.

Third Place: Alissa Silber,

The Newtown Bee, Newtown, CT

Daniel Hasselberger Continues To Beat The Odds With PMG- It's always gratifying to see a newspaper revisit someone, but this fine portrait of a very brave young man is much more than a followup -- it's a window into a world not many of us could handle.

OBITUARIES

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Nicholas Rondinone,

Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT

The Toll Of Trauma- This story was very well handled, especially when considering the very difficult and emotionally sad circumstances surrounding Jeremy and his family. The writer did a great job balancing the many aspects around all of this.

Second Place: Wayne Phaneuf,

The Republican, Springfield, MA

Obituaries- A great job sharing the details of the remarkable life of Dave Starr. This piece goes through his many accomplishments, but also gives us a feel for the many lives he touched throughout his career.

Third Place: Craig Semon,

Telegram & Gazette, Worcester, MA

Legendary Worcester rocker dies- Excellent job putting together this fine tribute to a legendary musician!

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

First Place: Marc Larocque,

The Enterprise, Brockton, Brockton, MA

Remembering a Brockton Original Colorful career took lawyer ... - This is a wonderful tribute to such a vibrant, lively man who lived a remarkable life.

Second Place: Jonathan Phelps,

The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA

Retired Red Sox photographer, Jack Maley, dies at 95- Very well written - this really captures the flavor of a very beloved man and an excellent photographer.

Third Place: Jacquelyn Voghel,

Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA

The thing itself: Family, friends, writers remember life of editor Richard Todd- Great tribute to a man so many people admired and looked up to. Richard Todd would have approved of this piece.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Letitia Baldwin,

The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME

Sue Hubbell, 10/25/18- An obituary can be more than a recitation of events from someone's life—it can take you on a journey through their life. Letitia Baldwin allowed us to join Sue Hubbell's culinary road trip. This obituary weaves anecdotes and big-picture context to help us understand Hubbell's contributions and adventures. Baldwin expertly brings in quotes and particular detail so we can experience the major turning points in Hubbell's life and see how she lived it. And the kicker quote honors it all. Outstanding.

Second Place: John Stanton,

The Inquirer & Mirror, Nantucket, MA

Augie Ramos, Gone at 85- The power of obituaries is often in their ability to render the life of the subject in a way both expansive and particular. The life of Augie Ramos was both distinctive and illustrative of life in his community. Like all good stories, this obituary both shows and tells in an effective manner, and it leaves readers feeling as if Augie was an old friend.

Third Place: Bill Eville,

Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA

Peter Simon, 71, Chronicled Island With His Camera- Obituaries of well-known people pose a challenge: How do you describe a person's prominence without overstating things, while at the same time help us see their humanity? Bill Eville's obituary of Peter Simon effectively summarized Simon's privileged life and then brought us in close to show us — rather tell us — why Simon meant so much to his friends and the community.

RACIAL OR ETHNIC ISSUE COVERAGE

Daily Newspapers

First Place: Amanda Burke,
The Herald News, Fall River, MA

Defacement of graves at Fall River Jewish cemetery-
Excellent coverage from many sides of a local story that had national and international impact. Good coverage of public events enhanced with representation of some of the broader issues involved in the defamation.

Second Place: Greg Sullivan,
The Herald News, Fall River, MA

SOMOS FAMILIA Hispanic infusion has helped make Hilltoppers one big family- excellent coverage of how Hispanic infusion is impacting one aspect of community life -- baseball. A sports story that rises above the playing field.

Third Place: Kevin Andrade,
Providence Journal, Providence, RI
Ripped away- Sensitive report on the tragedy many immigrants face and endure and in this case succumb. Writing could be tighter but a good mix of narrative and background information.

Third Place: Elizabeth Roman,
The Republican, Springfield, MA
Families see 'light at the end of the tunnel' one year after Hurricane Maria- Well written, timely report that brings the human effect of a tragedy into focus

Weekly Newspapers

First Place: Zachary Comeau,
Worcester Business Journal, Worcester, MA
People of color left behind in legal marijuana industry- An insightful, readable story about an economic issue of personal concern to minority residents. Useful graphics.

Second Place: Courtney Lamdin,
Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Burlington Mayor's Attempt to Diversify Leadership Falls Short- Good in-depth research and reporting to spotlight the lack of diversity in leadership.

Third Place: Dave Eisenstadter,
Valley Advocate, Northampton, MA
Anti-Racism Now: Chipping away at racism by talking face to face- Extensive coverage of program through the voices of people involved. Good reading but kind of long.

REPORTING ON RELIGIOUS ISSUES

Daily Newspapers

First Place: Dave Altimari,
Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
Rise and fall of the Rev. Daniel McSheffery- Altimari thoroughly researched and skillfully presented the horrors of McSheffery's crimes and the church's legal battles with respect to the sexual abuse suits.

Second Place: Anne-Gerard Flynn,
The Republican, Springfield, MA
Bishop's legacy under cloud as DA receives sexual abuse claim-

Third Place: Deborah Allard,
The Herald News, Fall River, MA

RIGHT-TO-KNOW

Combined Newspapers

First Place: Josh Kovner, Dave Altimari,
Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
A Killer's Obsession- The Courant showed its exemplary commitment to the public's right to know by spending five years pursuing information about one of the state's most tragic events. The newspaper's persistence — despite the long and costly legal battles required — set the standard for public record pursuits. Only through this persistence do we now have an expanded understanding of the Sandy Hook shooting and what might be done to prevent such tragedies in the future.

RIGHT-TO-KNOW, *continued

Second Place: Staff,

Newport Daily News, Newport, RI

Right to Know - Portsmouth School Department Investigative Report- Refusing to take "no" for an answer, the Newport Daily News fought for an investigative report on the suicide of a local high school student. While this pursuit of truth by itself is worthy of recognition, the newspaper also strove to explain to readers why the battle was worth fighting. This education on why newspapers seek sensitive information is a public service in its own right.

Second Place: Rich Saltzberg,

The Martha's Vineyard Times, Vineyard Haven, MA

Coast Guard Lead- Fundamental to the public's right to know is government accountability. Through dogged reporting and public record use, the Martha's Vineyard Times helped explain how the U.S. Coast Guard failed the children living on its grounds. But perhaps even more importantly, the reporting helped protect the public by providing a better understanding of the lead paint dangers that still exist and what remains to be done.

Third Place: Staff,

Republican-American, Waterbury, CT

Right-to-Know- Utilizing public records to break stories and to enhance our understanding of communities should be a daily goal of every newsroom. The Republican-American shows the collective effect this type of reporting can produce. By routinely defending the public's right to know, the newspaper is reminding officials that they will be held accountable for their actions and providing readers the transparency they deserve.

SCIENCE/TECHNOLOGY REPORTING

Combined Newspapers

---

First Place: Sara Tabin,

Seven Days, Burlington, VT

Blood, Sweat and Shears: This Benson Sheep Farm Produces an Unusual Crop- A first class work, including in-depth reporting, compelling writing, and some very good explanations of how the reporting was done - and some very clear explanations of the science itself. Impressive job.

Second Place: Tommy Gardner,

News & Citizen, Morrisville, VT

Science for small towns- A terrific portrait of a good science teacher and why he mattered, told with grace, and illustrating the importance of science studies at the high school level. Excellent job.

Third Place: Middlebury College Chem students,

Addison County Independent, Middlebury, VT

Controversial technology could improve our world, CRISPR- A smart collaboration between a newspaper and a local college with some carefully told insights into genetic modification. Glad to see this kind of innovative partnership take place.

SOCIAL ISSUES FEATURE STORY

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Madeleine List,

Providence Journal, Providence, RI

Pregnancy riskier for black women- Terrific job in localizing a national trend - the disparity between pregnancy complication for black women in contrast to whites. I wish though that the editors had given more space on p1 to this story and had a better display of the statistics.

Second Place: Rebecca Lurye,

Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT

In Hartford, Gun Violence Is Rarely Far From Children's Eyes- Very impressive presentation on the toll that exposure to gun violence is on the youth of Hartford, and the programs that the city has to deal with the trauma.

Third Place: Elizabeth Roman, Leon Nguyen,

The Republican, Springfield, MA

Residents, business owners reflect on the neighborhood MGM Springfield visitors will see- Good setup piece for the neighborhood soon to be changed by opening of casino.

Third Place: Shira Schoenberg,

The Republican, Springfield, MA

Springfield middle school principal comes out as transgender- Well-written piece on an event that was likely the talk of the town for a week or more. Piece did well to describe pressures on the principal and statewide precedents.

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Harrison Connery,

Republican-American, Waterbury, CT

Batmen- An unusual story, rich in fascinating detail and very well presented. I did not realize how far we have come from the monopoly of The Louisville Slugger.

Second Place: Mike Anthony,

Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT

Racing Ahead, No Limits- There were many heart warming entries, but this simply grabbed me and wouldn't let go. Ryan Smith just will not be denied.

Third Place: Matt Vautour,

MassLive, Springfield, MA

Springfield's Central City Boxing is saving troubled kids; Can it be saved?- We all know there are humanitarians like Dean Fay out there, but not many have someone as gifted as Matt Vautour to present their stories. Whatever anyone thinks of boxing, Dean Fay puts it to good use.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

First Place: Tommy Cassell,

The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA

A list to live by- Stories of people battling serious illness are not uncommon, but Jake Silver's approach to a terminal situation is especially moving. Tommy Cassell applies just the right touch.

SPORTS FEATURE STORY, continued

Second Place: Kyle Grabowski, Daily Hampshire Gazette, Northampton, MA
Erik Ostberg spends baseball's offseason working out with Ahmed brothers- If you like baseball, you will love this behind the scenes story of how players are made and trained. Erik Ostberg has a count ear for dialogue!

Third Place: Tom King, The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
Silver Knights set to put offseason of tumult behind them- This story is a master class in reporting. Reading this gives you a superb insight into the complexity of running a minor league baseball team.

Specialty Publications

First Place: Walter Bird Jr. and Bill Shaner, Worcester Magazine, Worcester, MA
The Perfect Pitch- Well-designed and thoroughly reported. Covered "all the bases."

Second Place: Abagael Giles, Vermont Sports, Middlebury, VT
The New Hunters and Why We Need Them- Interesting look at modern-day hunting and why it's important. Well-reported and constructed.

Third Place: Lisa Lynn, Vermont Sports, Middlebury, VT
Training for Life: The Story of Sarah True- Detailed so that I felt I understood and knew well the subject of the story.

Weekly Newspapers circulation 6,000+

First Place: Derek Brouwer, Seven Days, Burlington, VT
The Mighty Bucks: Pro-Football Dreams Lead Vermonters to a Humble Arena- The details make the story. In-depth reporting at its finest, leading to a well-crafted feature story.

Second Place: Noah Asimow, Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA
Not Going Gently or Gracefully Into That Baseball Good Night- Creative and well-written feature that was fun to read.

Third Place: Andy Kirkaldy, Addison County Independent, Middlebury, VT

Weekly Newspapers circulation less than 6,000

First Place: Pem McNerney, The Source, Madison, CT
Race. Wreck. Fix. Repeat. - Exceedingly well-told story. Felt as if I knew the story subjects well. Good job connecting and making the reader feel the emotions of the subjects.

Second Place: Andrew Martin, Stowe Reporter, Stowe, VT
Best goaltender in Vermont?- Thorough reporting. Felt as if I knew all sides of the story subject.

Third Place: Andy Hutchison, The Newtown Bee, Newtown, CT
Trio Brings Dedication and Professionalism to the Newtown High School (Scorer's) Table- Interesting story about people associated with the games who we typically don't know anything about.

SPORTS STORY

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Shawn McFarland and Alex Putterman, Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
Critics worry about prep transfer trend- Strong story on the growing concern about high school athletes using prep schools to try to fulfill dreams of being a pro athlete — and those who decide to stay at their home school. This tackles the subject from a variety of perspectives.

Second Place: Shawn McFarland, Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
Esports is sweeping the nation and Connecticut high schools are the latest groups to join in- Timely and easily understood, even for readers who have never seen — let alone played — League of Legends or Fortnite The historical background of the sport in Connecticut is localized to the paper's readership, but it's the kind of story any general news outlet could/should produce.

Third Place: Chris Cotillo,
MassLive, Springfield, MA

How Alex Cora advanced English-language skills to become one of baseball's great communicators- An offbeat story about how Red Sox manager Alex Cora uses his bilingual ability to talk directly and seamlessly with all of his players.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

First Place: Brendan Kurie,
The Standard-Times, New Bedford, MA

Players show support for Rudolph- Strong reporting on a hot topic for the time. Made me want to know if he filed the appeal and what happened next. Nice job of explaining the rule in question.

Second Place: Tommy Cassell,
The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA
Sam's Squad- For those readers who weren't at the 5K race for autism, they could still experience the event. Good use of details and emotion.

Third Place: Geoff Smith,
The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA
Lee native to be inducted to Springfield College Hall of Fame - Interesting details from her past that illustrate what a trailblazer this woman was to earn her Hall of Fame nomination.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Abagael Giles,
Vermont Sports, Middlebury, VT
The Mountain Warriors- Fascinating topic with real-world ramifications. The reason for the team's race result provided a nice ironic twist at the story's end.

Second Place: Mike Mandell,
The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME
YMCA director gets roughed up - Although the headline is a bit misleading as to what the story is about, the author's use of that incident set the stage for a broader look at bad fan behavior.

Third Place: Andy Kirkaldy,
Addison County Independent, Middlebury, VT
Hatch 31 claims outhouse title — at last- A light-hearted, entertaining look at a team's long quest for glory in a unique competition.

SPOT NEWS STORY

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

---

First Place: Patrick Johnson,
The Republican, Springfield, MA
Family says woman killed by train pushed her granddaughter out of the way - From the lead to the final punctuation, this reporting was exceptionally well scripted, maintained continuity through various changes in focus, and provided a comprehensive overview of this horrific incident and the lifesaving bravery exhibited by the victim.

Second Place: Staff, Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA
Fatal shark attack on Cape Cod- Reporters Fraser and Bragg did exemplary work infiltrating this incident scene and doing follow-up interviews while witnesses were still inclined to recount their vivid observations - and participants appeared willing to candidly discuss their roles in the attempted rescue and resuscitation. Then they proceeded to lay out the details of this breaking news story from myriad gripping angles including the important reminder of the science / biology behind why the attack likely happened.

Third Place: Rebecca Lurye,
Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
Flood of overdoses leaves seven dead since Monday- With little time to react as this story was unfolding, this reporter embedded herself in this unfolding series of tragedies highlighting multiple aspects of the story - from candid conversations with active users, to public health officials, and the always challenging wild card of dealing with law enforcement agencies. Throughout, she maintained critical focus on the expanding introduction of fentanyl into the broader selection of illegal drugs within hours and days after they began hitting the streets of Hartford and neighboring communities.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

---

First Place: Mary Whitfill,
The Patriot Ledger, Quincy, MA
Wife murder suspect captured- Whitfill exhibits great spot news reporting that crackles straight off the ledes of both segments of this story. The reporter evidences an apparent good rapport with police in gathering and relating details of the suspect and arrest - and delivers an equally compelling and readable sidebar on the victim.

SPOT NEWS STORY, continued

*Second Place: Claire Galvin,
The Chronicle, Willimantic, CT*

Car chase ends in fatal shootout- Galvin's recounting of this harrowing situation and its tragic outcome is textbook in its structure, but presented in a highly engaging narrative.

Third Place: Kyle Stucker and Karen Dandurant, Fosters Daily Democrat, Dover, NH

Firefighter dies in apartment fire- While the opening could have been stronger - the reporting on this tragedy is nonetheless thorough, comprehensive, and sensitive.

Weekly Newspapers

---

*First Place: Tommy Gardner,
Stowe Reporter, Stowe, VT*

Look out - 160 stuck on lift- This spot news story is well served by a lede that few reporters might offer and fewer editors or publishers would carry through to print. Gardner has woven together an amazing amount of detail relating vivid descriptions while providing readers a unique analysis of a high altitude rescue situation while never straying far from the element of human drama that kept this reader engaged to the end.

*Second Place: Caleigh Cross,
Stowe Reporter, Stowe, VT*

Glider crashes in rugged terrain; 3 killed- Cross exhibits a wonderful skill combining the tragic facts of this story with a well-scripted transition and subsequent tribute to the local personality and pilot who was involved. The reporter helped the readers not only understand the dynamics of the incident, but the very human impact of its sad outcome.

*Third Place: John Flowers,
Addison County Independent, Middlebury, VT*

Alleged shooting scheme foiled- Well scripted and refreshingly thorough reporting given the fact that so many key details remained under wraps. Flowers exhibited fantastic initiative in accessing sources and sorting details into an important spot news report that maintained flow and continuity to the end.

TRANSPORTATION REPORTING

Daily Newspapers

---

*First Place: Paul Hughes,
Republican-American, Waterbury, CT*

Broken Roads- Two comprehensive packages on Connecticut's proposal to impose highway tolls for the first time in three decades shared 1st place by focusing on the pocketbook issue. The Republican-American gained an edge as the first to publish, but The Day evened the contest with a sidebar focused on tourism, a vital local industry.

*First Place: Lindsay Boyle,
The Day, New London, CT*

Everything you need to know about tolls- Two comprehensive packages on Connecticut's proposal to impose highway tolls for the first time in three decades shared 1st place by focusing on the pocketbook issue. The Republican-American gained an edge as the first to publish, but The Day evened the contest with a sidebar focused on tourism, a vital local industry.

*Second Place: Michelle Firestone,
The Chronicle, Willimantic, CT*

Somebody's loving turtles- Nice feature on a mystery turtle benefactor making and posting roadside signs warning drivers to be careful of turtles crossing the roadway. Included summary information on local species, as well as state regulations governing the posting of signs on state roads.

*Third Place: Ben Berke,
The Enterprise, Brockton, MA*

Train service to Boston every 15 minutes an elusive dream- The Enterprise provided solid reporting on how Brockton and nearby communities would miss out on state-funded commuter rail upgrades because of limits to the existing infrastructure.

Weekly Newspapers

---

*First Place: Rich Saltzberg,
The Martha's Vineyard Times, Vineyard Haven, MA*

Steamship Authority- With outstanding enterprise, the MV Times revealed a 25-year-old consultant's report showing that management deficiencies detailed in last year's highly critical report on the Steamship Authority shouldn't have been a surprise to anyone as they'd existed for years.

Second Place: Brian Dowd, Lucas Thors, The Martha's Vineyard Times, Vineyard Haven, MA
VTA strike- With routine-but-essential local news reporting, the MV Times provided extensive and detailed coverage on labor problems that led to a strike at the island's vital bus service.

Third Place: Steve Rappaport, Mount Desert Islander, Bar Harbor, ME
Buoy thieves range along Maine coast - An entertaining, enterprising and thorough approach to what might have been handled as a routine police-beat story about thieves stealing the bells on navigation buoys along the Maine coastline.

WEATHER COVERAGE

Combined Newspapers

First Place: John Stanton, The Inquirer & Mirror, Nantucket, MA
Rising Sea Levels: The New Normal?- The Inquirer and Mirror produced an incredible 5-part series on how rising sea levels will affect Nantucket, giving readers solid information on best and worst case scenarios. This series was an eye-opener on the impact to the island and residents, and detailing ways to prepare for and combat the effects of inevitable rising sea levels.

Second Place Staff, Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA
Tornado ravages Cape Cod-

Third Place: Benjamin Kail, The Day, New London, CT

Third Place: Tim Jamiolkowski, The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA
Headline Writing- An ending with a nice ring to it. Start with an ending to a fine tale. You can almost hear it.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Michael Kane, Scituate Mariner, Scituate, MA
Irish 'ayes' are smiling.
You don't have to be Irish to appreciate this headline.

Second Place: Seven Days, Burlington, VT
Blood, sweat and shears - Makes me smile.

Third Place: Stephen Fay, The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME
Ageless in the outfield - You can feel their effort on the field.

COMMUNITY/AUDIENCE INVOLVEMENT

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Newport Life Magazine, Newport, RI
Ninth Annual Newport Life Writing Contest- For nine years Newport Life has been providing amateur writers a showcase for their work. Editor Fred Albert calls it a privilege and he makes good on his word with a high quality and well-designed engaging section. A great way to share the community with the community.

Second Place: The Lincoln County News, Newcastle, ME
GSB Students Investigate- Sending eighth graders to investigate the community and write about it produced some interesting copy for the Lincoln County News. Excellent way to attract young students, their families and all that know them.

COMMUNITY/AUDIENCE INVOLVEMENT,

Third Place: Marshfield Mariner, Marshfield, MA

Schools of Thought- Teaming up with the local high school brought the Marshfield Mariner a trove of commentary on a wide variety of subjects, many of them provocative. Good effort to connect with young people and let the community know what they're thinking.

Daily Newspapers

First Place: Karen Montini,

Republican-American, Waterbury, CT

Community Karen- Ambitious project which just might be a model for the future. Part show biz and part news. The company reports it is bringing community groups and their news back in the paper and online, creating new content. Not everyone could pull this off but the Republican-American and Community Karen are on to something and score high marks. Bravo!

Second Place: David Brooks,

Concord Monitor, Concord, NH

David Brooks, Concord Monitor- The Granite Geek lives up to his name traversing New Hampshire for lofty topics not seen in many newspapers. He's the equivalent of a full-court press with a daily blog and weekly columns, newsletters, and podcasts. To top that off he hosts a monthly dinner with a panel of his choice to field audience questions, and those sessions are broadcast on local television.

Third Place: Gwenn Friss and Olivia W. Burns,

Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA

Curious Cape Cod- Nice variety of challenging and engaging topics, some of them supported by video, running on an almost weekly basis. A lot of papers do this but the Cape Cod Times sets the bar high.

SECTIONS

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT SECTION

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Julie Ann Weekes,

New Hampshire Union Leader, Manchester, NH

"NH Weekend" provided the most wide-ranging regional A&E coverage within in its class. The sheer number of local bylines and the scope of its content is a testament to their commitment and understanding of the New Hampshire A&D scene. Bravo!

Second Place: Staff, Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA

Kathi Scrizzi Driscoll- Useful, comprehensive, well-presented section. "Quick Looks" provide helpful guidance on upcoming events.

Third Place: Maria Reagan, Kristina Dorsey,

and Rick Koster, The Day, New London, CT

Arts by the Numbers- The Day does a solid job of covering its local A&E scene, although it lacked the depth and local-ness of the Cape Cod and New Hampshire sections.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA

Berkshires Week, June 13, 2019- Best Bets: Powerfully presented, comprehensive, entirely local section. The "best bets" section is a must-read for anyone in the area, and the writing is strong throughout.

Daily Newspapers

---

First Place: The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA

Food Page, Nov. 21, 2018- Great example of complementary text and images. While there are plenty of bagel how-tos out there, readers surely appreciate the local and authoritative voice. Overall, a page which strikes a nice balance between personal and professional.

Second Place: Linda Murphy, The Herald News, Fall River, MA

All from scratch- Attractive layout, but what distinguishes this page is the calendar column, which creates a sense of immediacy sadly absent from similar newspaper sections.

Third Place: Melanie Hitchcock, New Hampshire Union Leader, Manchester, NH

Flavors: Snack attack- Be careful with wordplay involving foreign languages, which can come across as disrespectful. But nice work keeping the page local.

LIVING PAGE OR SECTION

Daily Newspapers

---

First Place: The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA

Berkshire Landscapes, March 31, 2019- How lucky readers are to have the curation and skill of these editors and writers! This section celebrates every corner of the artistic world of the Berkshires. I wanted to see the plays, read the books, enjoy the art! The 20 women section is masterful local history. Feast on!

Second Place: Bennington Banner, Bennington, VT
Southern Vermont Landscapes 072019- Strongly local, useful Top Picks. I found the interviews compelling because the writers honed in on the human stories. As good a section as papers three times its size. Well done.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME

Living Page or Section 8/9/18, Sec II, Page 3- Flowers, story telling, opera and more. Picks the top items in town, strong sense of place, multiple interviews in lead piece. Motivates a resident to go and do!

Second Place: Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA
August 3, 2018 B Section- Excellent local history article on religious revivals/gingerbread houses. Could use more listings instead of just features to be more useful.

Third Place: Holly Camero, The Beacon-Villager, Acton, MA

Art Scene- Though the lead feature is perhaps but not the most important A&E event in town, the section is well organized and useful.

SPECIAL SECTION OR EDITORIAL SUPPLEMENT

Daily Newspapers

---

First Place: Kathi Scrizzi Driscoll,

Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA

Summer Times- Spectacular photography, vibrant writing. excellent coverage of every imaginable summer activity.

SPORTS SECTION

Combined Newspapers

First Place: Laurie Los Lee and Brendan Kurie, The Standard-Times, New Bedford, MA
ST sports section- The cover photo was phenomenal. I got a sense from the high school Super Bowl coverage just how important this team seems to be to the community. I do wonder if girls sports receive similar blown-out coverage like this. The entries in this competition were all heavily skewed toward football.

Second Place: The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA
Sports Section, June 23, 2019- The baseball photos were terrific. I liked the diversity to the section with different sports and outdoor recreation. Boys lacrosse players were recognized. Were girls lacrosse players recognized another day?

Third Place: The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
Football Tab- Refreshing to see so many ads in a newspaper! Nice to see that high school football tabs still sell. Good job providing detailed information of each team, including schedules and rosters (with uniform numbers). I know that's not an easy task.

EDITORIAL WRITING

Combined Newspapers

First Place: Alex Nuti-de Biasi, Journal Opinion, Bradford, VT
Someone rein in this reign of error- These editorials are short and sweet, to the point with pungent language. The paper even takes a swipe at itself; I liked that.

Second Place: The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME
Mud season has arrived, Law of the Land, The LePage Legacy- The editorial decrying mudslinging is a classic!

Third Place: Marianne Stanton, The Inquirer & Mirror, Nantucket, MA
Town Meeting; Island's Homeless; Heartbreak of Addiction- The editorial suggesting a change in the town meeting is an exceptionally well-reasoned attention-grabber.

Daily Newspapers

First Place: Casey Junkins, The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
Casey Junkins- Well-written editorials, almost breezy. I loved the one about the ordinance regulating pet chickens. Not every editorial has to be sober and steadfast.

Second Place: Chris Harris, Andy Castillo, and Joan Livingston, The Greenfield Recorder, Greenfield, MA
Bank of America, Downtown vandalism, Keeping the public's business in the open- Nicely done, well-written, just the right length.

Third Place: Heather Goodwin Henline and Matthew Burdette, The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
The writers even inject life into the formulaic political endorsement editorials. Well written.

POLITICAL COLUMNIST

Combined Newspapers

First Place: Jon Lender Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
Jon Lender - Jon Lender is from the old "I Smell a Rat" school of investigative journalism. Reading one of his columns is like reading a thoroughly involving short story. The narrative is one of corruption, usually subtle and circumstantial. Lender is too smart, too thorough and too familiar with the vagaries of the human condition, the law and the system to be fooled. What he lacks in pure lyricism, he more than makes up with street smarts and knowing how to find where the bodies are buried. The politicians of Hartford would justifiably be terrified if his name turns up on their caller IDs, because chances are he already knows the answer to the questions he's going to ask. Jon Lender exemplifies what it means to be a watch dog columnists. The readers of the Hartford Courant are exceptionally lucky to have him looking out for the community's best interests.

Second Place: Jack Spillane, The Standard-Times, New Bedford, , MA
Political Columnist - Jack Spillane- The New England region is lucky to have such an impressive range of two-fisted columnists who don't forget an unspoken obligation to entertain readers even in the midst of their crusades. Jack Spillane's chronicle of former New Bedford Mayor Scott Lang at the crossroads is a thing of beauty. It captures the ambiguity and questions still swirling around the respected pol who, despite conflict of interest suspicions is still a bit of a folk hero in his community. But it is Spillane's column about the city's suspicious and unexplained computer problem that drew this reader in the most. Jack Spillane is what you get when a first rate reporter turned columnist gets his nose out of joint about something others consider a minor inconvenience. Spillane's run through the various possible scenarios explaining the city's computer problems is a satisfying waltz through a pointlessly bureaucratic haze. He attempts to cut through the techno-babble and ritual "no comments" to put the pieces together for us. He isn't afraid to use his powers of deduction and inference. Jack Spillane is a truth seeker. If every newspaper had two or three Jack Spillane's on staff, our democracy just might survive another century or so.

Third Place: Jill Goldthwait, The Ellsworth American, Ellsworth, ME
Political Columnist, Jill Goldthwait, 11.22.18 & 3.7.19-
Jill Goldthwait is the rarest of regional political columnists -- she's both lyrical and relevant. Her lovely meditation on the architecture of Maine's capital flows nicely into a plea that Augusta Democrats not flaunt their new majority with bullying tactics against the Republicans. She reminds the Democrats that until recently, their positions were reversed. Her call for tolerance never sounds utopian or unrealistic. Ms. Goldthwait has the sort of editorial voice I would look forward to reading all the time. Even the way Ms. Goldthwait lists the banal, but interesting things about Maine is entertaining. She has an editorial voice that would also be perfect for a local NPR affiliate.

SERIOUS COLUMNIST

Weekly Newspapers

SPORTS COLUMNIST

Combined Newspapers

First Place: Matt Vautour, MassLive, Springfield, MA
The legacy of Dick Rehbein- What I most appreciated with these columns is the columnist did reporting. He spoke with people and provided perspectives his readers might not normally hear, especially regarding how to handle athletes accused of abusing women. The best columns are columns with reporting.

Second Place: Mike Anthony, Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT
Mike Anthony sports columns- Very well-written columns with nuance. Not everything in sports is black and white, as evident by the mixed feelings of the Whalers' return to Hartford and that we truly don't know who athletes are.

Third Place: Tim Dumas, The MetroWest Daily News, Framingham, MA
Story and Running with Strider- I enjoyed the play off names of runners in the marathon. It reminded me of something Steve Rushin used to write many years ago at Sports Illustrated. Nice job having fun with that column.

FRONT PAGE

Daily Newspapers circulation 20,000+

First Place: Telegram & Gazette, Worcester, MA
Grand slam!- Attractive and thorough coverage of a significant local event. The attention-grabbing headline and illustration convey the importance of the subject. Sidebar stories and graphical elements provide support. Page lacks variety but compensates by pursuing the main subject from different angles. Layout is airy and approachable.

Second Place: Jim Flynn,
Republican-American, Waterbury, CT
Under Siege- Eye-catching design, dramatic use of color and typography, interesting use of photo illustration, clear page flow, good local photo.

Third Place: Patricia Thompson,
The Republican, Springfield, MA
One Giant leap for mankind- Dramatic photography, color and typography in featured article and supporting art. Good variety. Clean, approachable layout.

Daily Newspapers circulation less than 20,000

First Place: Matthew Burdette,
The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
Milestone- Wonderful combination of dramatic lead art, typography, color and supportive use of skybox space. Good variety in content. Sharp layout with logical page flow. One concern: Leading within headlines is much greater than space between headlines and bylines/articles.

Second Place: Hope Hunt,
The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
Top 5 Contenders- Simple but interesting infographic with candidate photos and eye-catching typography. Good color, content variety and page flow. Helpful but not distracting skybox. Clean design. Second lead headline and subhead need more air.

Third Place: Matthew Burdette,
The Telegraph, Nashua, NH
Ted Williams 100th- Attention-grabbing skybox. Dramatic photo, pleasing and subject-appropriate color, interesting typography in lead feature. Good variety. Insufficient separation between article text and caption. Some additional air at bottom of pull-out quote could be pleasing to the eye.

Specialty Publications

First Place: Gabrielle Mannino, Chris Silva,
and Kristofer Rabasca,
Edible Vineyard, Edgartown, MA
Edible Vineyard spring cover- Photo illustration and colors convey warmth and friendliness. The perfectly placed image depicts a hands-on approach to the harvest. Page-bottom teaser type is understated but confident.

Second Place: Michael Cummo, Kristofer Rabasca,
and Chris Silva,
Vineyard Visitor, Vineyard Haven, MA
Vineyard Visitor cover- Action photo with reader-involving point of view and vivid color. A playful approach in banner type with solid and readable headlines.

Third Place: David Pollard, Lisa Lynn,
VT Ski + Ride, Middlebury, VT
FRONT PAGE - VT SKI + RIDE- Exciting and appropriate action photo, good color. Generally good typography, but "Season Preview" type presents a readability issue.

Weekly Newspapers

---

First Place: Jennifer Levesque,
Valley Advocate, Northampton, MA

Recruitment in Schools front page- Thought-provoking subject effectively presented with an excellent photo illustration, good color and typography.

Second Place: Mark Burridge and James Kukstis,
Marshfield Mariner, Marshfield, MA

Front page celebrating PRIDE month- A weighty issue addressed in package of featured story and sidebars with an informative graphic. Page is missing a strong photo. A lack of variety is offset by pursuit of the subject from different of angles. Use of color in crowded info graphic is overwhelming, but probably appropriate to the subject.

Third Place: The Manchester Cricket,
Manchester-by-the-Sea, MA

Turning Out- Generally eye-pleasing design, typography, photography. Page would have benefited from stronger presentation of lead photo, avoidance of headline bumping with drop cap.

OVERALL DESIGN AND PRESENTATION OF A SPECIAL SECTION

Combined Newspapers

---

First Place: The Republican, Springfield, MA

Outlook Learning from the past. Innovating for the future. The Western Massachusetts Way- This massive undertaking by The Republican is spectacular in both its design and its breadth and depth of content. It starts on page 1 of the newspaper and continues on inside sections' covers before moving into four additional sections. From start to finish, the design is excellent. Presentations are anchored with headlines to hold the accompanying text and photos. There are captions on every photo. Pullquotes add punch to the pages. The photos range from historic perspectives to current day activities, and all are well-worth viewing. There isn't a single cover or inside page that doesn't offer multiple points of entry. The style and tone are consistent throughout letting readers know they are still on the right track. Congratulations to The Republican team who produced this spot-on piece of quality journalism.

Second Place: Matt Hannon,
The Telegraph, Nashua, NH

Forty Under 40- "40 Under 40" sparkles and not just because the cover design is aglow with golden stars and rays of light. It's because it has taken the time to produce a reader-friendly publication loaded with information about the up-and-coming leaders in its community. It's inviting, with a solid, inviting and consistent approach. Each profile is presented in an easy-to-read format loaded with information. The primary photos capture folks in their work environments. And kudos to the photo staff for rounding them all up.

Third Place: The Hartford Courant, Hartford, CT

College Football: Season of Transition- There's nothing like a football team with a new quarterback to rally the hometown folks, and the Hartford Courant has rallied its troops to tell the story of the Huskies. It's a fun and inviting section with strong headlines and photos. The design moves you along from article to article with points of interest such as drop caps and boldface emphasis. Its overall look is strong ... perhaps, like a defensive end.

OVERALL DESIGN AND PRESENTATION OF A NICHE PRODUCT

Combined Newspapers

First Place: The Salem News, Salem, MA

Marblehead Home and Style- There's no need for a GPS thanks to Marblehead Home and Style's Christmas Magic guide. An eight-page section filled with a variety of information from parking to getting around to highlights of the many events helps readers navigate the Marblehead Christmas Walk. The remainder of the magazine is graced with appealing photos, inviting headlines and easy to read content. It has the look and spirit of an invitation to sit before a blazing fire and learn more about a charming tradition.

Second Place: Gloucester Daily Times,
Gloucester, MA

Cape Ann North of Boston Life- A dash of history – T.S. Eliot once lived here – combined with a hardy dollop of current features such as the "Recipe Box" are presented in an alluring style bound to draw in readers. Photos – lot and lots of local folks – are displayed in appropriate sizes and intertwine with strong headline displays. And that cover photo – it's a stop-and-stare image – truly stunning. The design and photography team must have had a ball as they worked to produce this issue.

OVERALL DESIGN AND PRESENTATION OF A NICHE PRODUCT, continued

Third Place: The Telegraph, Nashua, NH

Granite- The “A Flair for Fare” centerpiece in Granite reflects the overall content of this striking magazine. The headlines are designed with typefaces that reflect the content of story about a chef who says, “We’re here to make people happy.” The photos give a closeup of this chef as a real person. And the layout echoes that a serious yet enjoyable approach is essential to success. Throughout the issue, strong headlines, loads of local photos, generous use of white space and consistency of design prevail with enjoyable and readable results.

OVERALL DESIGN AND PRESENTATION OF PRINT NEWSPAPER

Combined Newspapers

First Place: The Republican, Springfield, MA

The Sunday Republican knows how to design a quality newspaper for its readers. Its lively and cohesive design standards offer interesting points of entry for readers. The pages have consistent spacing of elements on every page, leaving enough white space to lead readers from article to article. A mix of headline sizes and dark and light fonts anchors articles and lets readers know the relative weight of each one. Photos are appropriately sized and include captions (thank you ever so much). Pullquotes help break up long legs of type. In short, it’s a winner.

Second Place: The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA

The Berkshire Eagle - The Berkshire Eagle packs a lot of news into its publication – a deft and appreciated trick. A shining example is its page 1 index to inside articles and upcoming features. It maintains a consistency in layout throughout with solid headline styles and spacing. Of special note in the Feb. 3 issue is the design of the “Sent Away” package by the Eagle Eye Team. Each section starts with a lively centerpiece that’s sure to draw in the readers.

Third Place: Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA

Vineyard Gazette - What a gift the Vineyard Gazette offers to its readers. This steroid-sized broadsheet reflects its 1846 founding and a sense of belonging to both the history and future of the community. Rather than showing its age, it flirts with the charm of island life. It has an even and consistent pace, stories about historic homes and folks and a reefer story to online features. Photos are run large. Every community column is graced with a sketch of its iconic image. And where else would you read this headline: “Sharks Rock; the Rest Are Just Chum.”

OVERALL DESIGN AND PRESENTATION SPECIALTY PUBLICATION

Combined Newspapers

First Place: Vineyard Gazette, Edgartown, MA

Edible Vineyard- Edible Vineyard looks good enough to eat. It’s loaded with photos – scene setters, close-ups showing real personalities, group shots that don’t look like “shoot them at dawn” poses, and, of course, the food – fabulous. But the special ingredient is the water color illustrations – yes, that fish does look as if it is jumping from the sea. Overall, it’s a design that pulls all of its components together to make a visual feast for readers.

Second Place: Martha's Vineyard Arts & Idea, Vineyard Haven, MA

Martha's Vineyard Arts & Ideas Magazine- Take a deep breath before opening this magazine, which bills itself as the only glossy arts magazine on Martha’s Vineyard. It’s is breathtaking. Of course, there is the art itself, but the magazine is also loaded with photographs, both historic and current, that lend a sense of awe. The presentation does let the reader breath from time to time, while moving them along through the content. The headlines are of a size and weight that keeps them from over-shadowing the artwork. Overall, a trip through this magazine is like a tour of a multi-faceted art museum.

Third Place: The Block Island Times, Block Island, RI

Block Island, Close To Home, A World Away- The cover photo of this travel edition is so stunning that readers might well be tempted to pack their bags and make their way east. Vibrant indeed. Inside are scenic images capturing the beauty of the island alongside copy blocks clearly defined with tips and info for an idyllic visit to this idyllic island. It’s hard to put down, and even harder to not flip back to that cover design.

Third Place: Boston Business Journal, Boston, MA

Best Place to Work- Honorable Mention:

A graphic on pages 14 and 15 illustrating the perks of places to work earns Best Place to Work in Boston an honorable mention. Helping readers put facts into perspective is always a much-appreciated design feature.

BEST SOLUTIONS JOURNALISM PROJECT

Daily Newspapers

---

First Place: Leah Willingham, Geoff Forester,
Concord Monitor, Concord, NH
Finding Hope, Concord Monitor- This is a brilliant project. Brilliant. Here's why:

1. Actionable. The information given on all five days provided audiences with information that could change their lives -- from data to telephone numbers to pull quotes that show the issue is real.
2. Captivating -- the images are respectful yet rich with raw emotion. It's one thing for a writer to describe; it's another for a photographer to capture raw emotion that tells the story
3. Connectable -- Just about every story started with a name or a story about a person. It would be so easy to write a series filled with jargon and numbers. But the reporter gained trust with numerous people and was able to show, not just tell. It's cliché, but a story is only as good as the notebook filled with notes. The reporter definitely put in time and passion and emotion into this project. I can tell because this project isn't simply about mental health/suicide; it's about the people who live it on a daily basis.

BEST SOLUTIONS JOURNALISM PROJECT,

continued

Second Place: Shawne K. Wickham,
New Hampshire Union Leader, Manchester, NH

Beyond the Stigma- The reporters/writers took a very issue-oriented topic and put human faces on it. Great job turning what could be a dense news series into a human interest series that captivates an audience through the lives of people living these stories, and ultimately showing solutions/changes to fighting an epidemic.

Third Place: Christopher Peak,
New Haven Independent, New Haven, CT

Teacher Solves Schools' Big Math Problem- As the comments below the story point out, math is a very difficult subject to teach and learn. The reporter does a great job of showing how and why this teacher's work matters -- she's changing young people's minds about math. The story is nicely structured with understandable themes, including the students' perspectives. And this is a story that anyone can relate too because we've all learned math at one point (to some degree), and really relatable to helping parents understand what's happening in the classrooms.

EXCELLENCE IN NEWSROOM COLLABORATION AND PARTNERSHIPS

Combined Newspapers

---

First Place: Grant Welker, Brad Kane,
Worcester Business Journal, Worcester, MA

City of Immigrants- There's long been a symbiotic relationship between research companies and news organizations. This project, though, extends that relationship through actual collaboration of storytelling.

There is a clear reason why this topic is of importance to the local community -- the data show the impacts via science and that anecdotal stories help the audience connect to the topic by introducing us to the faces and names of the people who are making impacts on the community.

This collaboration shows how a smaller news organization can produce high quality journalism that competes with larger news organizations.

Kudos to all involved in this collaboration project.

Second Place: Staff, The Day, New London, CT

CuriousCT- I've long been told that if I want to attract an audience, include "real" people in my stories. Your news organization has gone beyond that. If we are to produce information that impacts an audience, we should ask the audience what it wants to know. I genuinely believe there is no shame in crowdsourcing story ideas -- especially at a time when our audiences can go this or that way for information. If we as news organizations want to remain open, we must be more relevant -- we stay relevant by publishing news that our audiences not only need but want.

Kudos to you for taking the grant and applying it to producing information that matters to your community. Now, if we could get larger news organizations to realize it's okay to ask their audiences what's newsworthy.

Third Place: Staff, Granite State News Collaborative,
New Hampshire

Granite State News Collaborative- Keep doing what you're doing because you're heading in the right direction with collaboration for the right reasons.

Through your collaboration, your editor's personal story showed an extended audience what it's like to live with a mental health issue -- and as we all know, mental health issues are not limited to just one person or one community.

Collaboration in journalism these days is not simply limited to co-reporting. As news organizations continue to face economic struggles, in order to journalism well, we have to start thinking outside the box as to how to maximize our resources -- and as you detail in great length -- your news organization is doing just that by sharing resources -- impactful news -- with other news outlets. That's why most of us get in the business -- we don't do it for the money, we do it to make a difference.

BEST NICHE PUBLICATION

Daily Newspapers

The Martha's Vineyard Times,
Vineyard Haven, MA

The MV Times dominates the local news and advertising spot. A reader gains a thorough knowledge of local issues shaped by good editorials. A&E is outstanding and entertaining. Special kudos for a good calendar enhanced by superior layout and design as is the whole paper.

First Place:

The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA

The Berkshire Eagle continues to add to its reputation of resetting the quality of local daily newspapers. Its dedication to a strong package of local news, editorial commentary and opinion and community activities helps bring back what were the standards of a good local daily newspaper. Clearly the way the newspaper is managed is significant to its success given not only the impressive work of the news staff but the willingness to dedicate reporters/photographers to special assignments on important issues that must require a dedication to time, effort and expense that is hard to find in many newspaper of today.

Second Place:

Concord Monitor, Concord, NH

Here is yet another New England newspaper that exhibits the quality traits of good reporting and hard work to bring the best they can to the readers and communities they serve. The wide range of community reporting on all topics of events and activities is enhanced by the paper's additional dedication to special topics of serious issues that impact readers lives. Special topics research takes time and dedication in newsrooms that are challenged in this day and age. But the Monitor's news staff continues to deliver impressive and important in depth reporting as it holds itself to a standard of strong daily reporting and quality writing.

Third Place:

Eagle-Tribune, North Andover, MA

This is among those newspapers in New England that is keeping up with bringing quality community news reporting to its readers. In addition to the daily news presentation, the Sunday Eagle Tribune offers a substantial package of news - hard news and social and entertainment news. This effort can assure subscribers they are getting the best they can from the daily paper that serves the readers and the communities in which they live. In addition the daily and Sunday sports section is one of the best in reporting on local sports in the region, particularly those of the local schools. Few daily newspapers do such an impressive job of focusing on local sports.

First Place:

Cape Cod Times, Hyannis, MA

The times was our choice because they reach for excellence while being solid in many categories. Fatal Shark Attack was gripping to read and staff got eye witnesses and bystander photos. The midweek day of choice had a strong editorial that could have been a difference maker on Falmouth Affordable Housing. Local election & town meeting coverage were solid. Feature section lively. All around top notch!

Second Place:

Providence Journal, Providence, RI

Very impressed with the suicide survivor story, especially the multiple modes of story telling and weaving together many stories. Great enterprise! We like the "local first" approach and strong statehouse coverage, especially on the Evergreen contract bill, holding the governor accountable to her campaign promises. Sports was heavily dominated by pro sports-not much for a parent, etc. for local athletes.

Third Place:

Republican-American, Waterbury, CT

The Rep-Am staff does an impressive job with local news. From high school sports and honor rolls to police logs and social news, they work hard to reflect their market and provide unique content. Features are well-written and presented. All in all, the Rep-Am does a solid job.

Congratulations to all of the award winners!
