YANKEE QUILL

GUIDELINES AND SUBMISSION

ABOUT THE YANKEE QUILL

Presented annually by the Academy of New England Journalists through the auspices of the New England Society of News Editors, the Yankee Quill is considered the highest individual honor bestowed by fellow journalists in the six-state region.

The award recognizes broad influence for good across a career, primarily in New England. It honors contributions beyond excellent reporting, writing, or editing, including work to strengthen journalism, advance a free press, and uphold First Amendment principles.

ELIGIBILITY & REQUIRED MATERIALS

Open to journalists in print, digital, and broadcast media, including newspapers, magazines, online news organizations, radio, and television.

Submit this completed form and at least TWO supporting recommendation letters. Letters should describe how the nominee embodies the purpose of the Yankee Quill and provide specific examples of extraordinary achievements and lasting influence.

WHAT SUPPORTING LETTERS SHOULD ADDRESS

- Contributions to their own news organization: leadership, innovation, mentorship, service.
- Contributions to New England journalism: industry-wide impact, press freedom, advocacy.
- Community betterment: civic engagement, service, and meaningful community impact.

Letters from different perspectives are encouraged—for example, one from a close colleague and another from an industry peer or community leader. Go beyond general praise and routine dedication: explain what the nominee did, why it mattered, and its lasting impact.
